THE BACK LABEL

Importers play an important role in bringing in quality wine from around the world to our shores. We rely on their judgment of quality in distinctiveness of wine. It's easy to compare an importer to your local butcher. Just like a butcher will have an assortment of cuts of different meats at numerous prices, a wine importer will carry a variety of wines for an array of different tastes and budgets. We champion smaller importers that seek out smaller-production winegrowers, who craft wine from organically and bio-dynamically grown grapes and do very little to manipulate the wine. These importers not only visit and keep close ties with the winegrowers they represent, but they ensure that the wines are shipped and stored at cellar temperature. This is especially important, for wine is easily damaged by heat.

Below is a list of our favorite importers and a brief description of their portfolio:
